CHAR'S CHATTER

"WHO'S COLLECTING WHAT?"

I'm almost 11 years old now and have never gotten into collecting. That makes me over 70 in people years, and I've met a lot of 70 year old folks who have collected a lot of stuff. Baskets, coins, dolls, military memorabilia, books, art prints, stamps, glassware, cars, you name it. And let's not omit all the things that can be classified as "dust collectors". My mom has a lot of those dust collectors in the house that she cleans regularly without any swearing or breakage. She's a Saint I tell ya. If it were me, I'd have chewed those up or busted them all over the floor just for fun. But I understand how they mean things to people. She can tell you where and when she got any particular piece. Maybe it was a gift, or she got it in her favorite antique store or on a trip 20 years ago. It's a tangible item with all its associated memories - a connection to your past. My friend "Buddy" (golden retriever) collects tennis balls and I know how much they mean to him. His problem though is that he's always losing them (many have been lost to the mower) but he's too dense to know that so he still runs around looking for them. Oh Buddy. But if he did find them all, it would be quite a collection!

So the question at some point for collectors will be, "What do I do with all this stuff?" You're downsizing and the kids don't want it. You need to sell to get some cash. Your interests have changed. Etc. Etc. I'm not in the antique or collectibles business, but I do have my paw in our art business and we do get a fair amount of inquiries from folks looking to sell their collection of art prints, paintings, etc. If the work in question is by an artist we've represented, we try to assist in any way we can. But if we get calls about anything else, we're kind of like you. Try to find places familiar with the items you have and ask them. Check the internet for values, dealers, collector clubs, auction houses specializing in your items. List items for sale on ebay or other online spaces. Donate items to a charity fund raiser or to your local library, etc. There are options out there but it does take time and research. And don't be discouraged if a dealer says they aren't interested (because they probably have a lot of that stuff too.) They may still be able to offer you suggestions or provide you with useful information.

It seems to me most collectors are "older" folks - like 8 or more in dogs years (you can do the math this time). Which leads to my question, "Are younger people collecting, and if so, what are they collecting?" Do I not know because they hoard their collections and don't let anyone into their homes to see? Are they just collecting stocks, digital images and new iphones? Collecting visa stamps in their passports from their travels? Seriously. What is anyone collecting these days? I scratch my ears from time to time about this and still haven't figured it out. But maybe we don't need to collect. As you get older, age inevitably helps you to collect wrinkles, gray hair, aches and pains and probably stress, pharmacy loyalty cards, reading glasses and advil. Maybe that's enough, but it's certainly not what I would classify as enjoyable!

With art, each individual piece provides the enjoyment. Whether it is just one piece or 10 by one artist, or 10 pieces from 10 different artists, each one has it's own special meaning to you. If it didn't, you wouldn't have purchased it. Every art piece, or even "dust collector" in your home connects with you in some way. So if you find something you love and have the means to acquire it, give it the proper consideration so you may enjoy it forever, or until I come to your home and trash it. But seriously, that's one thing I think about with the younger folks. Do they invest in items that can provide a lifetime of enjoyment, or do they think only of immediate gratification and throw away items? That my friends, keeps me scratchin'.

Take care and I hope to see you in Gettysburg soon,

Char

NEW LOCATION FOR HMTA GETTYSBURG COLLEGE ATHLETIC BUILDING

The HMTA show will be held in the Gettysburg College athletic building on West Lincoln Avenue (look for the tall glass tower shown left). Ample free parking is available directly across the street in the Football Stadium Parking Lot, on Constitution and W. Lincoln Avenues.

History Meets the Arts is honored to continue its partnership with Pink Out, Inc. of Hanover, PA.

The Pink Out Women's Cancer Fund was established in 2007 to provide financial assistance to breast cancer patients. It has since expanded its cause to cover all types of cancers affecting women, such as ovarian and cervical cancers. Instead of helping with medical expenses, this fund was designed to help with daily living expenses such as rent, food and utilities. It also helps to purchase aids that insurance does not cover such as wigs, prostheses and special garments.

While there is no fee for admission to the show other than the required ticket for the Friday night opening night preview party, a voluntary suggested $5.00 one-time donation will be asked of attendees for entry to the show. Representatives from Pink Out, Inc. will be on hand with more information about their non-profit organization. Donations of any amount are greatly appreciated and all entry proceeds will benefit this worthy cause.

For more information regarding Pink Out, please contact them at 717-476-3456.

OPENING NIGHT PREVIEW PARTY

Friday June 9, 5:00 pm - 9:00 pm
$35.00 Ticketed Entrance

The History Meets the Arts show & sale kicks off Friday evening June 9 with the opening night preview party. Opening night is your opportunity to view and/or acquire the newest artwork created specifically for the show. NICK SERRATORE & CLAY SMITH

First time attending Artists at HMTA

We're honored to have artists Nick Serratore, Clay Smith & Daniel Horne for their first appearance at HMTA this year! (see Daniel Horne info on pg. 5)

NICK SERRATORE grew up in Pennsylvania and moved to Delaware in 1996. Coming from Pennsylvania, he was immediately struck by the flat landscape in Delaware. In the days and months that followed his move there, his impression was enhanced to include a remarkable palate of colors, a vast array of textures, and an ever changing pattern of lights and shadows. The artist writes, "I work primarily in pastels. I like their brilliance and immediacy and feel somewhat able to capture the textures of the landscape. In my work, I try to share with the viewer where I am."

CLAY SMITH grew up in Richmond, Virginia and became interested in muzzle loading guns in 1972 while in high school where he made his first rifle in the school shop class. He would sometimes skip school or on weekends, drive to Colonial Williamsburg where he would sit and watch master gunmakers at work. In 1988, he was given a summer job interpreting at the gunshop and later became a master gunsmith himself at Colonial Williamsburg until he left in 2009.

One of Clay's personal highlights was to become friends with and build a gun for actor Wes Studi, best known for his role as Magua in "Last of the Mohicans" and as Geronimo in the film by the same name. Another highlight was being commissioned by Linda Bruckheimer to produce a silver and gold mounted rifle for her husband Jerry Bruckheimer in 2009. Jerry Bruckheimer is a movie producer known for films such as the "Pirates of the Caribbean" series, "The Rock", and "Top Gun" to name a few. He is also known for his television shows such as "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation", "CSI: Miami", "Without a Trace" and "Hill Street Blues".

ON THE BOOKSHELF

The Frozen Hours by Jeff Shaara. AUTHOR SIGNING June 9-11 at HMTA

NY Times best-selling author Jeff Shaara turns his discerning eye to the Korean War in this riveting new novel, which tells the dramatic story of the Americans and the Chinese who squared off in one of the deadliest campaigns in the annals of combat: the Battle of Chosin Reservoir.

June 1950. The North Korean army invades South Korea, intent on uniting the country under Communist rule. In response, the United States mobilizes a force to defend the over-matched South Korean troops, and together they drive the North Koreans back to their border with China.

But several hundred thousand Chinese troops have entered Korea, laying massive traps for the Allies. In November 1950, the Chinese spring those traps. Allied forces, already battling stunningly cold weather, find themselves caught completely off guard as the Chinese advance around the Chosin Reservoir in North Korea. A force that once stood on the precipice of victory now finds itself on the brink of annihilation. Assured by General Douglas MacArthur that they would be home by Christmas, the soldiers and Marines fight for their lives against the most brutal weather conditions imaginable—and an enemy that outnumbers them more than six to one.

The Frozen Hours tells the story of Frozen Chosin from multiple points of view: Oliver P. Smith, the commanding general of the American 1st Marine Division; Marine Private Pete Riley, a World War II veteran who now faces the greatest fight of his life; and the Chinese commander Sung Shi-Lun, charged with destroying the Americans he has so completely surrounded.

Hardback, 2017 (available on May 23), 6" x 9", 560 pages. $28.99 plus tax and/or shipping. Book orders will ship on or after 5/23. See postage rates in detail box.

*JEFF ALSO SIGNING AT LORD NELSON'S GALLERY Saturday May 27 from 7:00 pm to 9:00 pm. ****

William Wells and the Struggle for the Old Northwest by William Heath.

Born to Anglo-American parents on the Appalachian frontier, captured by the Miami Indians at the age of thirteen, and adopted into the tribe, William Wells (1770-1812) moved between two cultures all his life but was comfortable in neither. Vilified by some historians for his divided loyalties, he remains relatively unknown even though he is worthy of comparison with such famous frontiersmen as Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett. William Heath's thoroughly researched book is the first biography of this man-in-the-middle.

A servant of empire with deep sympathies for the people his country sought to dispossess, Wells married Chief Little Turtle's daughter and distinguished himself as a Miami warrior, as an American spy, and as an Indian agent whose multilingual skills made him a valuable interpreter. Because he warned the U.S. government against Tecumseh's confederacy and the Tenskwatawa's "religiously mad" followers, he was hated by those who supported the Shawnee leaders. Because he came to question treaties he had helped bring about, and cautioned the Indians about their harmful effects, he was distrusted by Americans. Wells is a complicated hero, and his conflicted position reflects the decline of coexistence and cooperation between two cultures.

Hardback, 2015, 6" x 9", 500 pages, extensive notes, biblio., index, $34.95 plus tax and/or shipping. Book orders will ship on or after 5/23. See postage rates in detail box.

Peril & Perseverance in the Pennsylvania Backcountry 1755-1765 (subtitled: Shearman's Valley, Tuscarora Valley & the Mouth of the Juniata) by Linda Martin Gilmore. AUTHOR SIGNING June 9-11 at HMTA

Today the valleys and streams of Pennsylvania's Perry County, Juniata County and the area around the mouth of the Juniata River are peaceful and prosperous. But more than 250 years ago, this area saw danger and bloodshed. It was still wild in the 1750's and settlers from the east were just beginning to tame this frontier.

The area suffered two waves of attacks from Indians and their allies. The first wave of attacks took place in 1756. Settlers either fled the valleys or stayed and depended on private forts. Patterson's Fort, the only manned fort in the region provided limited protection, but Robinson's Fort, Bigham's Fort, and isolated families in cabins were attacked. Many settlers died or were taken captive. Some captives were able to come home, while others never returned. A second series of attacks swept through the valleys in 1763, including a skirmish which took the life of prominent settler Alexander Logan, as well as the Battle of Buffalo Creek.

Who were these pioneering settlers in the backcountry? How did they fare? Who survived, who perished, and who never returned home? This well-documented book relates these stories of the Pennsylvania backcountry in the mid 1700's, revealing the bravery and endurance of the men and women who settled these valleys.

Paperback, 2016, 6" x 9", 184 pages, b/w illustrations, $24.00 plus tax and/or shipping. Book orders will ship on or after 5/23. See postage rates in detail box.

Historical Account of Bouquet's Expedition Against the Ohio Indians in 1764 by William Smith.

With the French gone from North America, the Indian's situation had become precarious at best. In 1763, Ottawa war leader Pontiac successfully united the tribes in the Ohio country. His goal was to drive all English settlers, traders and soldiers from the Ohio country. Colonel Henry Bouquet was chosen to lead an expedition into the Ohio country to put down this Indian uprising called Pontiac's Rebellion, and this is the story of Bouquet's expedition.

Preface by Francis Parkman, includes a two page map and five short but highly informative appendices: (I. Construction of Forts; II. French Forts ceded to Great Britain; III. Route distances from Philadelphia to Fort Pitt; IV. Indian towns on the Ohio River; and V., Indian Nations of North America)

Hardback, originally published in 1907, 6" x 9" pages, limited edition, 180 pages, was $39.95 - now $24.95 plus tax and/or shipping. Book orders will ship on or after 5/23. See postage rates in detail box.
